Also, Dr. Hab. Michał Wyrostkiewicz, in the current academic year, twice obtained an Erasmus + scholarship and conducted classes at the University of Presov (Slovakia) and the State University of Ostrogozka Academy (Ukraine).

7. DIRECTIONS OF ACADEMIC RESEARCH IN THE INSTITUTE OF LITURGICS AND HOMILETICS AT CUL

A. CHAIR OF HOMILETICS

In the Department of Homiletics, research is carried out related to the subject of interest in fundamental, material and formal homiletics. In the field of fundamental homiletics, the Chair's research first and foremost deals with the theological principles of preaching, the liturgy as the place and source of the Word of God, the post-Conciliar theology of a homily, and the reception of modern Church teaching about homilies in preaching a homily in Poland. Much research is also devoted to working out specific ways of implementing the Church's call to the New Evangelization.

In the field of material homiletics, the research conducted at the Department of Homiletics focuses on the contents in preaching a homily, which the salvific power of the homily mainly depends on. On the one hand, this is about faithfulness to the basic sources, such as the Bible and the liturgy, and, on the other hand, it is about the way of communicating contents that will be consistent with the Church's teachings on homilies and adapted to the cultural traditions of modern times. It should be emphasized that Polish material on homiletics still requires refining and a comprehensive approach. Homiletic preaching in Poland in this content is often devoid of a theological element and is characterized by a large degree of generality. Therefore, the Department is developing the contents of modern homily preaching. The Department will also deal with the development of the principles of interpreting a homily's sources. Many research works are dedicated to the homiletic theory and practice of outstanding Polish preachers. The Department also conducts research on contemporary preaching related to fidelity to the kerygma of the most important evangelical pericopes.

Research in the field of formal homiletics pertains to ways of proclaiming the Word of God, including the use of modern forms of transmitting the faith and developing a preaching language. The aim of this research is to develop ways to attractively and effectively transmit the Word of God. In this field of research, the Department also refers to rhetoric, yet not in its classical form, but in the form of communication theory. The research conducted here focuses on the homily as a communication event and on the communicative and interactive dimensions of the preacher's formation.

Since homiletics is interdisciplinary, the Department also refers to the achievements of other theological sciences (biblical studies, dogmatic, liturgics) and the humanities (psychology, pedagogy, sociology, philosophy). This concerns cultivating homiletics in its context. The challenge facing the research conducted at the Department of Homiletics is to present homilies and homiletics as an example of a theological synthesis. It is a synthesis of God's Word, the liturgical celebration and Christian life. In this approach, the homily combines all theological disciplines: it speaks of the salvific mystery of God (which biblical, dogmatic and fundamental theology deal with), reflects on the Christian life (the object of research in moral and spirituality theology) and is directed towards the liturgy and started with the liturgy (cf. DPF 16, CL 16). The Department will also continue research related to contemporary determinants of preaching related to contemporary culture, which is constantly undergoing dynamic changes.

In academic research, the Department of Homiletics also focuses on looking for ways of reaching out to modern man with Christ's message, the Lord, the Savior and the Messiah, to a believer and the de-Christianized. In these times of the New Evangelization, it is not enough to reproduce the model of mass pastoral work and to limit ourselves only to proclaiming sermons from the pulpit to the faithful gathered in the Church. The new life situation of Poles, the process of de-Christianization, a change in human morality, mentality, problems and needs, demand new ways of talking about Jesus Christ.

B. DEPARTMENT OF HISTORY OF LITURGY

In the Department of the History of the Liturgy, research is conducted on the forms of religious piety in Polish sanctuaries, taking into account the historical development of the Divine Service based on liturgical books and non-liturgical sources such as chronicles, votive books, prayer requests and thanksgiving and historical literature related to particular places of religious worship. In addition, issues are also related with presenting the liturgical and legal requirements for celebrating after the Second Vatican Council. To fully present this development, research is being conducted on the liturgy in pre-Vatican II ecclesiastical books.

The subject of the research are the forms of popular piety contained in Polish prayer books and manifestations of liturgical worship in religious communities in Poland. Another field of research is the use of information and communication techniques and the media in pastoral activities (exploring the possibilities of using ICT in celebrating the liturgy). We also determine the subjective aspects of information exploitation, develop the concept of info-ethics and info-components in the natural environment of the human person, as well as liturgical formation in the parish, meaning actuosa participatio in liturgical groups.

C. DEPARTMENT OF LITURGICAL THEOLOGY AND SPIRITUALITY

In the Department of Theology of the Liturgy and Liturgical Spirituality, research is conducted on the theology of the sacraments in the light of eucharistical and biblical texts as well as the current teachings of the Church's Magisterium. The second important topic is the theology of the celebration of the liturgy after the Second Vatican Council and participation in the liturgy of all of the priestly people of God, meaning the clergy and the laity.

In addition, the existence of the Chair and the direction of research determine the developmental tendencies in contemporary theology. The latest research field is liturgical spirituality in American and European theology. The main goal of the research is to introduce the emergence of liturgical theology, which as a new and interdisciplinary way of practicing theology integrates all the theological disciplines around the cult paradigm and directs them towards the Christian life. Due to the existence of its many models, research is aimed at comparing them to the most socially engaging American liturgical theology. The main goal of the research is also to prepare an integral model of liturgical theology that takes into account the contexts of European theology, including Polish. Research on these issues seems to be very important for the further development of liturgical theology, but also for theology as a whole.

INTERNATIONAL SYMPOSIUM
“LITURGY AND NEW EVANGELIZATION”
Lublin, CUL, June 8–9, 2017

On June 8–9, 2017 at the John Paul II Catholic University of Lublin, an international symposium took place entitled “Liturgy and the New Evangelization” organized by the CUL Institute of Liturgics and Homiletics by the Team of Poland’s Episcopate for the New Evangelization and the Institute for Church Life and the Faculty of Theology of the University of Notre Dame in the USA. The basic assumption of the organizers was to enable a meeting for liturgists and those involved in the work of the New Evangelization in order to reflect on the evangelization dimension of the liturgy and the liturgical dimension of the New Evangelization, then to formulate practical guidelines on the shape and spirit of the liturgical celebrations in the spaces of New Evangelization.

The symposium was opened by Rev. Dr. Hab. Sławomir Nowosad, CUL professor, dean of the Department of Theology, who welcomed the speakers and numerous participants and thanked the organizers of the event for taking up very relevant and important issues for the present and future of the Church. The first session was supervised by the Director of the Liturgics and
